ANTELOPE ISLAND

Effort to Have Government Set It Apart.

BUFFALOES BREED

N VIEW of the interest the government has shown in the preservation and propagation of the buffalo herds of the country, J. E. Dooly of this city has suggested to Secretary Wilson of the department of agriculture the possibilities of Antelope island, in Great Salt lake, as a natural preserve for the animals. Recent dispatches report that the department has recommended an appropriation of $30,000 for the purchase and transfer of a Montana herd to the Yellowstone National park. The conditions in the Yellowstone are much less favorable for the preservation of the animals than those of Antelope island, because of the destruction by hunters, the difficulty of protection from poachers, and the rigors of the climate, which interfere with food supplies in winter. In a letter to Secretary Wilson on this subject Mr. Dooly says: "I have received from Hon. Frank Baker, superintendent of the National Zoological park, a copy of senate docu-ment No. 208, 'Preservation of the American Bison in United States and

"In connection with this matter, I beg to inform you that I have on Antelope island, in the Great Salt lake, twenty-six buffaloes in excellent con-

Many Natural Advantages.

"The island is covered with natural grasses, which maintain the animals in excellent condition during the summer and winter. Owing to this fact, they have not that rough and underfed appearance which the buffaloes of the parks of San Francisco and Chicago to. I have tried to cross them with the Galloway, but never succeeded. I have one cross between a buffalo bull and a Hereford cow, which is now about 2 years old. Should the government desire to propagate such animals, I would respectfully suggest that the location where this herd is maintained and the herd itself be examined."

In addition to its other natural ad-antages, Antelope island has a splendid water supply and its isolation, sur-rounded as it is by water, makes it an ideal location for a park preserve. The island is about twenty miles long, three to five miles wide, easily accessible from the main land, and the cost of maintaining a national reservation there would be almost nothing as compared with other locations which require a mounted patrol and have no natural barriers to prevent the migration of herds.

Mr. Dooly's herd has been increasing and he has arranged for an exchange of stock with Mr. Baker, the superintendent of the National Zoological park, which exchange, it is believed, will prevent inbreeding and develop a stronger strain in both the herds affected. It has been suggested that if the government acquired Antelope is-land, it could be used as a preserve, The witness then told how he had, in not only for the buffalo, but for a fort will be made to get the island

SUDDEN DEATH AT BINGHAM. Neils Hansen of Union Expires of Apoplexy.

Union, June 1.—Neils Hansen of Union died suddenly at Bingham June 1 of appolexy, aged 69 years. He had been visiting his son in Lower Bingham and was returning to his place of business in Upper Bingham. It was his custom on returning home to ride on the rear end of the Copper Beit engine. After visiting his son he saw the engine coming up the track, and in order to reach it he had to walk up a steep trail to the track, which probably overtaxed his energies, for shortly after he had mounted the upper platform of the engine he was seen to totter and roll over on the coupling bar and from there to the track. The engine was stopped immediately and it was discovered that Mr. Hansen was dead. The coroner was immediately notified and an inquest was held, the jury dead. The coroner was immediately notified and an inquest was held, the jury holding the railroad company entirely blameless in the matter. The funeral
